They didn't count on the poll numbers, but Paul Ryan is happy to see the other Republican candidates fleeing the race. In the face of an energized base and a nationwide polling deficit, Donald Trump and Ben Carson have called it quits, while Rick Perry and Mitt Romney are struggling to hang on. If the party is looking for a comeback candidate, Ryan is the top contender. "Paul Ryan is enjoying himself," says Republican strategist Brian Walsh. The House Budget Committee chairman is one of the party's greatest policy wonks, a master of Congressional budgeting and an expert on entitlements. His speech in Iowa this week emphasized those themes. But he also connected with voters who have been hurt by the "job-killing" economic policies of the Obama administration, Walsh says. "Ryan has always been a great speaker, but he is also one of the best organizers in the party. And he's got great relationship with the base." The problem with a Ryan candidacy, Walsh says, is that he has virtually no name recognition outside of Washington. Most Republicans don't know who he is, and they may not recognize him as one of their own. "If he makes a move, he will have to reinvent himself," Walsh says. "Paul Ryan's downside is he's not one of our own." Will he challenge Trump for the nomination? Ryan is not saying right now.

You will notice that there are a few builds that do not appear in the shot; for this set, the pictures will be focused on QK88 builds that had me hooked.

Karina and Robert G. of West Hartford, CT were married in July 2012 at Pionde Manor in Glastonbury, CT. Karina and Robert are a dynamic team who are full of energy and a dynamic tandem. From the day they first started to explore the possibility of marrying, they met with Allison G. and Jeff Z. to lay out the details of their event. "It was very important to us that we had great service and that the experience was one to remember for a lifetime." The photos that Allison and Jeff captured at the ceremony and in their reception venue have been cherished as fond memories by the couple and are the inspiration behind a myriad of favorites Karina sent to her Bride and Groom. "I really wanted to give Karina a wedding that she will always remember and cherish forever," says Allison. With every issue of the "Big Gatherings" section, Karina is spotlighted to tell her own unique story about their wedding and how it has inspired Karina and Robert to be "Big Gatherings" themselves. As a gift to Karina and Robert and their readers, the Big Gatherings section of our website will be dedicated to the couple and will feature photographs from their day and those from their reception.
